Retrieve intraday price charts for ASX-listed iShares Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs). Learn the answers to some common questions: Why does the opening price on the ASX vary from the closing price in the US? What influences an iShares ETF's intraday price?

THE PRICING TOOL MAKES IT EASY FOR YOU TO:

- Retrieve intraday price charts for ASX-listed iShares ETFs.
- Understand the relationship between the closing price of the underlying fund in the US and the opening price of an ASX-listed fund.
- Understand what affects the price of an iShares ETF throughout the trading day.

The price variation between the US closing price and the AU opening price may be due to changes in:

- The value of the underlying securities that make up the fund (denominated in their local currency)
- The exchange rate between the A$ and the foreign currency of the underlying holdings
- Changes in market sentiment of the underlying holdings or index alternatives, such as futures.

The blue shaded area shows when an iShares ETF's underlying market is open during AU market hours. Spreads should be tightest during this time, as market makers have greater visibility into the value of the fund's holdings.

The y-axis, which shows both AU and US currencies, is reset on a 20 minute delay according to the latest FOREX exchange rate.
